Introduction

This first history of Cornelius and Linna Ades Whitacre and their descendants, has been compiled, as a loving service to these splendid folks, by M. Jeannette Halcy, a step-daughter in the home of Thomas Elwood Whitacre. She is deeply indebted to members of the different families, and especially to Mrs Nettie Lamielle and Mrs. Anna Heck, reunion historians, and Miss Ella Whitacre, the secretary-treasurer of the reunions, for the necessary data, and to Mrs. C. F. Arnold, through whose kindness the Coat of Arms, and some early history was secured.

It is the hope that what has been here gathered together may stimulate a keeping of full records in each family, and that at some future time, a more complete volume may be printed

Coat of Arms of Whitacre Family.

White Horse Crest

Simon de Whitacre was the first of the Whitacre family to go into England. That was in 1050. He was the great general in the army of William the Conqueror, and through his generalship William the Conqueror was put to the throne. In 1373, the English courts took up the name Whitacre and changed the spelling to Whitaker. One branch of the family took up the new way and one kept the old, but from this Simon de Whitacre have sprung all the Whitacres and Whitakers of England and America. The white horse crests the Whitacre coat of arms as it was revised by William the Conqueror after the battle of Hastings in 1066. The helmet was added to denote men of war as well as members of the royal family of Saxony.

Tradition of the family relative to the crest of the white horse, indicates that it was a token of their Saxon origin, the white horse being the emblem of Saxon royalty. It also commemorates the white horse so prominently depicted upon the high grounds of Berkshire, described as follows in the Waverly magazine of May, 1880:

"Perhaps the biggest horse in the world is the "White Horse" of Berkshire, England. It is 170 yards long to the end of the tail. It is a figure cut in the side of a hill. A long way off it looks as though drawn in chalk lines, but the outlines are really deep trenches in the soil, these trenches being kept clean by the people who take great pride in it. The trenches are six yards wide and two feet deep. The eye of the horse is four feet across and the ear is fifteen yards long. It can be seen for sixteen miles. When the time comes to clear out the trenches, the people make a sort of picnic of it, play all sorts of rustic games, and have a fine time. The sub strata of chalk being exposed by the removal of the turf and soil along the outlines of a rude, colossal horse is similar to that displayed on the standard of Hengist, but so large as to occupy an acre of ground."

It is known on the maps as the White Horse Hill, and the low or flat country underneath it, "The Vale of the White Horse." Thomas Hughes, Esq., the noted author, in his interesting book—"The Scouring of the White Horse" says: "Rich as our country is in historical monuments, there is none more remarkable than the White Horse. The hill has been called the Hill of the White Horse ever since the time of Henry the First, 1100 to 1135."

The Old Spring.

This spring, with the spring house and the wide spreading beech tree is on the old homstead in Fairfield township, Columbiana County, O., and from it Grandfather and Grandmother Whitacre often drank.

Early Record of the Family

John Whitaker lived in Makefield township, Bucks County, Pa. In the records of Falls monthly meeting (Quakers) of Bucks County, Pa., which was in Falsington, Pa., John Whiticher (so spelled) and Jane Scott are recorded to have declared their intention of marriage at Falls monthly meeting 11th month and 6th day, 1702, and their intention was declared the second time the 12th month and 3rd day, 1702. A committee was appointed to see if they were clear from any entanglement, and reported they were both clear and they were left to accomplish their marriage. Jane Scott was the widow of John Scott, 'late of Thet in Yorkshire, England' who died in 1700. In the year 1704, 5th month and 14th day a son was born to John and Jane Whiticher, and he was named John. According to records of Christ church, Philadelphia, Pa., John Whiticher, son of John Whiticher, Sr., and his wife Jane, was married to Naomi Hulme, the daughter of George Hulme and his wife, Ruth Palmer- Hulme, June 24th, 1734. Falls monthly meeting, 4th month and 4th day, 1735, shows this: "John Whiticher, Jr., acknowledges as follows: 'Whereas, John Whiticher, Jr., married contrary to the order of Friends, this day brought a paper of condemnation for the same which was read and received.'" John Whiticher Sr., purchased 600 acres of land of Thomas Stevenson, and conveyed 225 acres of it to his second son Robert. No record appears of the conveyance of balance of the 600 acres of land. John Whitaker (so spelled) Sr. died 1737. He left a will but there is no record of the settlement of his estate or will.

The records of Kingwood monthly meeting in New Jersey, inform that John Whitacre, Jr., (so spelled) and his wife Naomi, brought a certificate to that meeting from Falls monthly meeting the 6th month and 9th day, 1737 Kingwood monthly meeting of New Jersey that John Whitacre and his wife Naomi and children are granted a certificate in 1761 to settle in Virginia.

Cornelius Whitacre,
A brief history of whom, and of their descendants is contained in this little book.

Linna Ades Whitacre,
Wife of Cornelius Whitacre

Cornelius Whitacre and Wife

A few years ago the Whitacres all over the country became interested in their ancestors to quite an extent, owing to the fact that some valuable property was thought to be awaiting the heirs of John and Jane Scott Whitacre. No doubt most of the relatives will recall the time when a man by the name of Whitacre from Kirksville, Missouri, paid them numerous visits and fairly besieged them with letters, soliciting their aid in trying to secure this immense fortune that was simply waiting for some one to claim it. To properly file their claims it was necessary to trace their lineage back to the said John and Jane Scott Whitacre. Although the fortune still rests on the other side of the Atlantic, if it is not a myth, and those who so kindly gave up the wherewithal to secure the fortune have charged that amount to the balance on the wrong side of the ledger, yet they have one thing to be thankful for and that is the fact that they are able to give a family tree of eight generations, three generations from John and Jane Scott Whitacre to Cornelius Whitacre.

John Whitacre and Jane Scott Whitacre's oldest son was named John and his wife's name was Naomi Hulme. They had ten children: Joshua, John, Benjamin, Caleb, George, Naomi, Joseph, Robert and Hannah. Joshua the oldest was married to Ann Stear. They were both Quakers. Six children were born to this union: Daniel, Cornelius, Hannah, Naomi, Mary Ann and Phoebe.

Cornelius the second child, was born January 6th 1790, in Virginia, and was brought to Ohio when he was twelve years old, his parents settling in Hanover township, Columbiana county. He died December 19, 1870.

The following is a copy of a deposition made by Cornelius Whitacre April 29, 1867 concerning his family. It was made in the interest of a Whitacre fortune also:

"The State of Ohio, Columbiana County.

Be it remembered that upon this 29th day of April, A. D. 1867, personally appeared before me, William J. Jordan, Clerk of Court of Common Pleas, within and for said County of Columbiana, Cornelius Whitacre of said county, to me well known, who deposes and says as follows, viz.: I am a resident of Fairfield township, Columbiana county, Ohio, a farmer by occupation. I am seventy-seven years of age. I am a son of Joshua Whitacre and Ann Whitacre. I was born January 6th, in the year 1790, in Loudon County, Virginia, where my said parents then resided. Our family moved from Loudon County, Virginia, to this county where I have since resided, and my father and mother died in this county. My said father, Joshua Whitacre, was a son of John Whitacre and Naomi Hulme Whitacre. I believe my grandfather aforesaid had died before I was born, at least I do not remember of ever having seen him. I remember distinctly of having seen my grandmother, Naomi Whitacre. She stayed at my father's house once when I was about seven years old, (I think) for several days and took charge of myself and brothers and sisters while my said father and mother went upon a visit to some of the relations. Grandmother, Naomi, was then quite an old woman. I should think she was then seventy-five years of age or upwards, my recollection is that she appeared to be quite an old woman. I have often heard my said father and mother speak of Grandfather, John Whitacre, and have understood from them that he came from England when a young man and settled first in New Jersey where he lived awhile and then moved to Loudon county, Virginia. I also remember hearing my father and mother speak of the children of John Whitacre—my uncles and aunts on my father's side. I do not remember their respective ages, nor am I certain that I know the exact number or remember all the names of the children of Grandfather, John Whitacre. Those that I remember are Robert, Benjamin, Joseph, George, Naomi, John, Caleb, Joshua. I have the impression that there was another daughter by the name of Hannah but cannot recollect for certain. I remember having seen one or more times Uncle Caleb, Benjamin, Joseph, and Robert and also Aunt Naomi. My father named his third daughter Naomi after his mother Naomi, Grandfather, John Whitacre's wife.

Signed

CORNELIUS WHITACRE.

Affirmed to by said Cornelius Whitacre before me, and signed by him in my presence before me this 29th day of April, A. D. 1867 as witness my hand and the seal of said Court of Common Pleas.

WILLIAM J. JORDAN,

Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas,

(SEAL)

Columbiana County, Ohio.

Grandfather Whitacre had the ability to speak in public, and did so very frequently. He always spoke when occasion presented itself on the slavery question.

At one time he was dismissed from his meeting because of his anti-slavery activities. After the war had closed and the slaves were free, he received notice to return to the meeting. He did so, upon persuasion, and was glad to do so, when it was understood that he would not acknowledge having done wrong, and he was accepted with that condition granted.

Grandfather did not approve of music. A story is told of his not allowing any music in his home, and as some of the children had gotten hold of a jew's harp, while one stood guard near the house, two others went into the orchard, and out of the hearing of grandfather tickled their ears with the bewitching strains of the little instrument. Grandfather never swore, and he taught one of his grand children, Elsworth Holi-

In Memoriam

No history of the living, however brief, can be truly written without thought of those who are not now among them; no family can be so happy that bereavement will not leave its shadow; no life can be so joyous that grief does not impress it. So, in loving remembrance of those "gone on" is given the following poem from the pages of the historian:

"Thy sun has set to us, but shines elsewhere
In Heaven's night,
"Th' encircling gloom" is gone, and all is fair
In Heavenly light.
Thy home is reached, thou dost "not ask to see
The distant scene," for it is near to thee.

And thou art "ever thus," no need to pray
For guidance on a dark and rugged way;
The day of sorrow and of doubt is gone,
Thy love remembered and thy haven won.

And now thy faith is sight, and thou dost know
That God is Light;
And over "moor" and "torrent" we must go,
Through the dark night.
Till in the glorious morning light we see
The "angel faces" of the blest and thee.

Last Word

December 12, 1911 was the one hundredth anniversary of Cornelius Whitacre and Linna Ades' marriage. A hundred years is a long, long time. So many changes have taken place in that time and such great changes, and yet we hardly realize the extent of them. But if our grandparents could see things as they are to-day, as we live to-day, they would be very much impressed. I think they would be more than pleased and interested in the young folks that are their descendants.

The Whitacres, from all accounts, are a quiet, home loving people. As Tennyson says: They plod on in the even tenor of their way.
